SPORTS

(By Igoo.)
New York, April 3.—Jack O'Brien was seated in the Metropolitan hotel, eating his dinner. He talked as follows:
"This is the first solid bit of food I've tasted since the fight," he offered by way of greeting. "Not ill, mind you; no bad effects, but this," and he showed his tongue, which was badly lacerated all along the right side. "This is the result of those wicked little uppercuts he delivered in the clinches. I have been unable to chew, so I eliminated solid food."
"I don't want to take anything away from that boy, and I am not going to say nice things about his greatness simply because it was Jack O'Brien he bested. I got a little careless in that tenth round though, just as sure as I am sitting in this chair. I don't remember that last part of it at all. I didn't realize what had taken place until I felt the towel brushing over my face, and even then I had but a vague idea of the outcome of my fight for reinstatement. I want to fight him again, and I have made my wishes known to Johnny White and Britt. I called at Ketchel's hotel this morning to see if I couldn't get him to promise me a return bout, but was disappointed, inasmuch as Ketchel had taken a machine and returned to Woodlawn Inn to remain in training. Britt doesn't seem anxious to have his man meet me again. Of course, don't quote me as saying that they fear me. I don't believe that, and they may possibly be counting on easier game. That's business, of course, and I can't kick.

"What do you think of Ketchel's chance of beating Johnson?"
"He's got a bully chance. I'm not saying that because he got me, but that is my honest opinion. His courage and punch would beat the black man. He can whip Langford, too. I don't suppose that many will agree with me when I say that Ketchel can whip Johnson, but you wait and see. He's the man to do it. He's getting heavier all the time, and that is what he needs. He certainly is a great man. Besides his shift, he has a splendid left jab. Do you know that he hurt me more with his straight left jab than with his justly celebrated shift punches? He didn't hurt me about the body. But that shift is really wonderful and I would say, far superior to Bob Fitzsimmons'. Not as deadly? Indeed it is. You must remember few men ever landed one on me, and he did. Many of them were wild, but I recollect I am as fast a moving man as there is in the ring and this boy had that to contend with.

"Let him hit men who are not always going round, as I do, and something will drop. You know he has piled up that wonderful record of knockouts with that left hand and just because he didn't always land it on me is no reason that it isn't as deadly as Fitz's. It's a natural shift, and the greatest ever seen in a ring. The beauty of it is that if he misses he comes out of one shift into another and what one hand has failed to accomplish the other has.

"The thing that struck me most forcibly about his work is, that though he missed time and again, he never was off his balance. That is remarkable. Never once was his body out of plumb. It isn't necessary for him to get set. He doesn't hit with his body as other fighters do. By that I mean, he doesn't send his body along with the rest of the punch.
"It comes from either hand. He hits with the full force of his arms alone. He's the hardest puncher I ever faced, and I've met them all. And don't think he isn't clever. He's clever in his own way—homepun, if you will. Did you notice the queer way he has of turning his shoulders away from you as a straight left comes at him? Like a flash he is shifting and bringing his right hand around to counter you. He made me miss repeatedly; and how many men have I ever missed with my left hand before?"

"Now, that is just where they are going to go wrong when they figure Langford to beat him. It won't be any easier for Sam to hit him than it was for me. Wait and see now if they fight. His advantage over me was in that small ring. It can't be over 18 feet, and you know the regulation 24 foot is my workshop. If we meet again I will insist upon the regulation ring.

EMERYVILLE RESULTS.

Oakland, April 2.—Flying Squirrel, the fast son of Cessario, gained a neck victory over Glennadeane in the Gebhard handicap at Emeryville today. The winner carried top weight and was favorite throughout the betting. Schilling, who came from Arc-

Royal Tourist was clearly the best in the Harper handicap and won from Stanley Fay and Don Enrique. The card was an attractive one and with fine weather prevailing there was a large attendance. Results:

SANTA ANITA RESULTS.

Los Angeles, April 3.—Polls, an added starter and coupled in the betting with Sir Ashton as the R. L. Thomas entry, captured the Colin stakes at Santa Anita this afternoon. Sir Ashton, his stablemate, was second. Six starters contested for the prize.

Czar took the third race after a desperate drive, with Maltby, which easily beat Guy Fisher for the place. Jockey Page fell from Bell of Brass in the second race, but luckily escaped uninjured.

First race, selling, six furlongs—Free Knight, the Bear, 114 (Butwell), 2 to 1, won; Spohn, 111 (Howard), 6 to 1, second; La Gloria, 107 (Kennedy), 2 to 1, third. Time, 1:12.25.

WALSH ASKS A HIGH PRICE FOR HIS WORK.

American League Twirler Not Signed By Chas. Comiskey.
Big Ed Walsh hasn't signed his contract yet. During breathing spells while coaching the Yale pitchers the White Sox star announced the other day that it would take $7,500 to lure him back to the box for the Chicago club. The chances are that Walsh's ability to win ball games meant several times $7,500 to the owner of the White Sox team last year, but does it follow that Walsh should be paid $7,500?

In the first place, it would wreck the ball club, for every other player would go on strike in a holy minute. One player has to be paid in a certain proportion to what his team mates get. By paying the men Lajole, Cobb, Walsh and Donlin in proportion to the amount of money they draw through the gates of the ball club, the club would be away above any reasonable limit and a club owner wouldn't be able to get a just return on the money invested. In fact he would go broke.

The public never has had a very clear idea of just what the ball players received in their envelopes on the April until October. Many think that every well known player gets at least $4,000, and that the most famous stars draw down from $5,000 to $10,000. And the public's sympathy has all been with the player until very lately. There have been so many phoney holdouts, retirements and threats to jump to the outlaw league by players who never intended to do anything but jump into the band wagon when the proper time came that the dear old public has switched its sympathy—or quite a chunk of it—to the club owners, who have outgrown the position of slave owners and barterers in "human chatties."

Still others think the players are doing pretty well to drag down as much as $2,200 for a season on the diamond. If all the big league pay rolls were summed up and an average taken it would be found that the players received about $3,000 to $3,500 apiece for the six months' work or play, whichever way one happens to look at it.

Does $3,000 seem like a pretty fair remuneration for a season's work? The public is divided on that, but probably there are as many who would say that an average of $3,000 is just.

How many ball players would be able to earn $3,000 in other lines of endeavor? There are some, but mighty few. Filder Jones is passing up a salary of $15,000 to look after business interests, but business interests made possible by judicious investment of the money he earned as a ball player. Mike Donlin, with his wife, Mabel Hite, has been making $1,000 a week all winter, but merely on the strength of his baseball reputation. Take away the baseball popularity earned on the ball field and few of the players could gather the shekels as bountifully as they do by playing ball.

McCLOUD LEADS THE FIELD.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 3.—National Open Champion Fred McCloud, of the Midlothian Golf club, Chicago, led the field in today's 36-hole United North and South open golf championship, with a fast card of 148.

Gilbert Nicholls of the Wilmington Country club was second in 152 and former Open Champion Alexander Ross, one of the local professionals, third in 155.

William C. Fownes, Jr., of the Oakmont Golf club led the amateurs with 163; William T. West of Philadelphia Country club second in 166, and Walter Fairbanks, the Colorado champion, third in 168. The concluding event on the country club's schedule is the first annual mid-April event booked for April 15, 16 and 17.

Atlanta, April 3.—Eddie Root, of Boston, won the six-day bicycle race here tonight from Bobby Walthour of Atlanta. The three teams that were on even terms at the close of the long grind, covered 985 miles and two laps. The teams were:

HARVARD DEFEATS PRINCETON.

Princeton, April 3.—Harvard defeated Princeton in a dual gun shoot here today by the score of 226 to 203. Harvard's score broke the intercollegiate record of 225 birds held by Yale.

WILLE KNOCKED OUT.

Philadelphia, April 3.—Sam Langford, the negro middleweight, of Boston, knocked out John Wille, of Chicago, tonight in the second round of what was to have been a six-round bout at the National Athletic club. The Boston man hit the Western fighter almost where he pleased.

REFUSES TO PAY EXPRESS ON DOG MINUS ONE LEG

Wooster, O., April 3.—A three-legged dog, upon which its owner refused to pay express charges because of its incomplete anatomy, has been put up for sale at public auction by the express company here on April 10. The dog has been advertised for sale and every step taken to make the sale as "refused express" legal.
When the dog was consigned to a young woman here, it had four legs. A day after it arrived, however, it broke out of its crate, ran away from the station and when it returned it was minus its left hind leg. The consignee called and claimed that she did not have to pay the full express charges as the express bill called for a whole dog.
"A dog is a dog," said the agent as he stood by his guns. The dog was left in his hands.

Liquids, Gases and Electricity

Can be measured as correctly as a pound of sugar or a gallon of syrup. In this add I will not say a word about the home comforts enjoyed by the uses of the electric current but instead tell you something of our meters and the system employed to keep them measuring correctly.

We maintain a meter testing and repairing department where we cheerfully invite the public whenever a meter is to be tested. If you think the bill rendered is not in accordance with the amount of current consumed, your meter will be tested, and if found correct, will again be reset in your store or residence. Our proving instruments, used for testing are manufactured by the Weston Electric Manufacturing Company of New Jersey, and next to a fine watch, there is no other mechanism so accurate or precise as the electric meter of today.

The Westinghouse and General Electric Co.'s are the two leading manufacturers of electric meters. Expert talent is constantly in this field of work for improvement and accuracy. Gas and electric meters usually run slow after the first or second year of use and are then brought in for correction. New York, Massachusetts and other states have frequently proven the accuracy of gas and electric measuring instruments by creating an office of public inspection for the purpose of carrying on this work, and the results obtained have been so universally accepted by engineers, mechanics and competing companies manufacturing electrical measuring instruments that doubts of their correctness, are no longer held.
